9:00 KATERINA ISMAILOVA
Dmitri Shostakovich opera Written in 1932, when the composer was 26, this work is the result of a 1935 revision for the Moscow Musical Drama Theatre.
The tragedy opens with Katerina and her father-in-law, Boris, who berates her for her barrenness. While Zinovy, her merchant-husband is away, she takes up with Sergei, a worker.
Boris finds them out; he beats Sergei. Katerina salts Boris' evening mushrooms with rat poison.

Boris' ghost spoors her with her continued adultery. Zinovy returns, denounces Katerina. Sergei murders Zinovy, Katerina and Sergei bury his corpse in the cellar. The police, underpaid and underprivileged, discover Zinovy just as the newly-married couple are about to make off with his fortune. Sergei, in a Siberian prison camp, begs Katerina for her stockings, at the behest of his former girl-friend, Sonyetka. Katerina pushes Sonyetka off a bridge, jumps in after her. The convicts, with the words, "O, to what end is this life of ours made so dark and fearful? Was it for such a life that man is born?" resume their places
